philosophy

The true definition of global citizenship

Global citizenship is a term that many people use, but few can actually define. At EF, we've been sending students abroad for over fifty years, and along the way, we've learned what skills—both hard and soft—are needed to become a truly successful global citizen. With our global contacts and international expertise, we've built a thoughtfully curated year that puts you on your first steps to adulthood in a globally connected future, and on the fast track to becoming a leader in the 21st century.

Join us, as we offer you the world. During this year, we'll provide all the tools and opportunities you need to decide who you're going to be in it. Find focus for your college education. Figure out how you want to make your mark on the career world. Test out what true service means to you. Learn how to communicate in another language. Experience civilization's greatest cultural achievements and architectural masterpieces firsthand with travel to Europe, Australia, and beyond.

We can't tell you who you'll become, but we can promise you a carefully built journey that will lead you to discover it for yourself.

We help students develop the 21st-century skills they will need to become global citizens who can thrive in an ever-changing world.

The EF Gap curriculum

Our curriculum is tailored to the needs of each participant. This is accomplished through the creation of an individualized learning and personal growth plan, facilitated by EF Gap Year mentors, but driven and managed by the students themselves. This is accomplished in four critical ways:

SELF-AWARENESS & GOAL SETTING

Students will work with EF Gap Year advisory staff to set goals using a 4-step model:

My Compass: An inventory of values, beliefs and interests that focus the goals of participants and ground them in moments of uncertainty.

My Future: Concrete goals for success in college and the career world.

My Gap Goals: A detailed action plan of how the year ahead can be used to achieve a student's vision of the future.

My Gap Bucket List: A list of horizon-expanding things to see and do every step of the way.

MODULE-SPECIFIC LEARNING

To ensure every EF Gap student is on the path toward global citizenship, we've designed a progressive module-by-module learning experience. Our structure provides space for students to develop the independence and self-reliance needed to grow into fully fledged adults while, at the same time, learn the hard and soft skills they need to become documented citizens of the world.

MENTORSHIP & COACHING

All EF Gap students are supported with an integrated mentorship and coaching program both pre-departure and throughout their time with EF. To ensure a rewarding individual experience, mentors guide students toward achieving their unique individual goals, help them stay focused and on-track, and provide advice and support every step of the way. This mentorship is provided both virtually and in person, depending on the location and structure of each module.

DISCUSSION & REFLECTION

Periodic discussion and reflection sessions at key points in every module help participants translate their experiences into learnings. Participants are encouraged to interpret the immediate environment around them from different perspectives throughout the EF Gap experience. Reflection sessions will be a time to compare and contrast impressions from different cultures, opinions, and world views.

Options for earning college credit

Looking for a more academic experience? Enhance your EF Gap Year or Gap Semester with coursework designed by Southern New Hampshire University (SNHU).

Students can earn three professional development credits each for their Language Study, Service Learning, or Internship modules. EF Gap Year students can combine all three modules and complete a summative project on the topic of Global Citizenship to earn nine total credits and a university-level certificate.

Students who attend these courses find they are more prepared for college success, better positioned to take on community, campus, or business leadership roles, and a step ahead when it comes to understanding what the professional world values.
